HEADLINE: What it should have been

BODY:

IN LAST Thursday's story 'Telecoms firms against plans for stiffer fines', we said all five respondents to a public consultation called by the Ministry of Information, Communications and the Arts are opposed to a revision of the Telecommunications Act providing for stiffer fines.

The Asia Pacific Carrier's Coalition, one of the respondents, has clarified that it is not opposed to the raising of the fines. Rather, the consortium of global and regional telcos is opposed to giving regulator Infocomm Development Authority of Singapore (IDA) the sole power to decide on and impose the bigger fines. It has proposed that the IDA should apply to a court to impose such a penalty.
